

Pyrolisk

Image not found or type unknown

Cockatrices are one of those monsters that make awesome a-hole monsters at early levels but aren't much to fear later on. However, back in second edition, the cockatrice had a firey cousin called the pyrolisk. Which, frankly, was way worse than a cockatrice. Or most other monsters for that matter.

What is a pyrolisk?

Frequently mistaken for its less malignant relative, the pyrolisk is virtually identical to the cockatrice except for the single red feather in its tail and the reddish cast of its wings. Whereas the cockatrice is motivated by instinct alone, the pyrolisk revels in spreading mayhem.

Anyone who locks eyes with a cockatrice catches on fire. And those that are really unlucky burn to a pile of ashes.

The pyrolisk's mortal enemy is the phoenix, although any creature which the monster encounters is likely to be attacked.

Challenge 1 (200 XP)

Immolating Gaze. If a creature starts its turn within 30 feet of the pyrolisk and the two of them can see each other, the pyrolisk can force the creature to make a DC 12 Charisma saving throw if the pyrolisk isn't incapacitated. On a failed save, the creature magically bursts into flame, taking 5 (1d10) fire damage; until someone takes an action to douse the fire, the creature takes 5 (1d10) fire damage at the start of each of its turns. In addition, if the creature is still on fire at the end of its next turn it must repeat the saving throw. On a failure, the creature's hit points are reduced to 0 and it burns down to a pile of ashes. On a success, the creature continues to burn as normal but does not need to make any additional saving throws.

A creature that isn't surprised can avert its eyes to avoid the saving throw at the start of its turn. If it does so, it can't see the pyrolisk until the start of its next turn, when it can avert its eyes again. If it looks at the pyrolisk in the meantime, it must immediately make the save.
